1. The Orenstein and Koppel locomotive and car repair shops in Spandau (Z65) reopened recently. They had previously been dismantled by the Russians. These shops, which employed about 1,400 persons before the war, now have only a hundred workers.
2. The Potsdam shops of the same firm are operating again with about 800 employees and are repairing four (sic) locomotives per month. In pre-war times these shops employed 3,500.
